DEATH CHARTS: An Astrological Tool for the Bereaved

Beginning with current theories of loss and recovery, using Elizabeth Kubler-Ross's stages of grief and moving onto current understandings of how to heal, including Davis Kessler's sixth stage of loss: finding meaning, this presentation offers a unique perspective in helping the bereaved find meaning during and after life shattering events.

Moving on, the presentation focuses on how to interpret a Death Chart, shedding light on deeper life lessons and growth potential that is possible as an outcome of personal loss.

Finally, four in-depth case-studies will illustrate the use of astrology as a healing tool for clients working to understand and find meaning as they recover from grief and loss.

BIO: Linda "Moonrabbitt" Zlotnick has practiced astrology professionally since 1978. From 1990 to 2011, she founded and led a three-year astrology school in the Twin Cities, training a generation of practitioners in the Upper Midwest. She currently serves as Director of Certification for the Organization for Professional Astrology (OPA), helping shape the standards of the field, and teaches the Master Class in Death Charts at Kepler College.

Her work with death charts grew from personal experience. In 2005, she lost her identical twin, and the long passage through that grief—guided in part by astrology—became the foundation for her first book, Star Sisters: An Astrologer's Memoir of Twin Loss (2019). In 2015, she began offering death chart sessions to clients and has since completed nearly 200, working with the bereaved to find clarity, meaning, and a path forward in the timing of their loved ones' passing.

Her new book, Death Charts: An Astrological Tool for the Bereaved, distills nearly five decades of astrological practice and a decade of focused work with the grieving into a guide for astrologers and death workers. Linda lives in St. Paul, Minnesota, with her wife. Learn more at astrologybymoonrabbitt.com.
